ABSTRACT

The selected Arkansas genealogical materials held by the Arkansas University library which are listed include how-to manuals, bibliographies, dictionaries, and encyclopedias and guides. General information on the state is available in genealogical and historical periodicals, general histories and biographical sources, and sources are indicated for census data on agriculture, classes, mortality, population, manufacturing, and products of industry. County publications focusing on the local level include bulletins and newsletters, cemetery registers, county census materials, county historical journals and newsletters, selected country histories, genealogical materials, marriage records, mortality schedules, and wills. Selected family genealogies and memoirs are also listed. Full bibliographic citations, including call numbers, are given. (MBR)

ARKANSAS GENEALOGY BIBLIOGRAPHY

Introduction: Scope and Content Note

This bibliography is a listing of Arkansas genealogical materials available in the Mullins Library at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. Although the bibliography has been prepared primarily for genealogists and those interested in pursuing their Arkansas heritage, it is hoped that local historians and students of Arkansas history will find it useful also.

Because of time limitations and obligations to faculty and students, we cannot actually help you with your research and therefore this bibliography is meant to be a self-help device for you.

There are, of course many different types of materials a genealogist must use. Among these are official U. S. census publications; state, county and city histories; various county bulletins and newsletters; county genealogical and historical journals; family genealogies and memoirs, cemetary registers; tombstone inscriptions; marriage records; mortality schedules; and records of wills and administrations. These are all listed in the bibliography.

The outline attached to the bibliography will aid you in visualizing its scope and range, and will allow you to focus on the specific types of materials you need. The outline proceeds from general publications that treat the "hows and whys" of genealogical research, to statewide publications, then various county publications and finally family genealogies and memoirs.

Notice that in addition to general biographical sources, the bibliography includes such categories as Arkansas state, county, and local histories. This is meant to be a very selective listing and is indicative only of the range of printed materials available. A more complete listing of state and county histories can be obtained by searching the card catalog and examining the Clark and Parham bibliography, Arkansas County and Local Histories, which is cited in this bibliography. In all the other categories in this outline, we have attempted to be as inclusive as possible in the compilation of all known sources in the Mullins Library at the time the bibliography was prepared.

The general state and county histories, the county historical journals, and the biographical section were included because genealogists often find them helpful in "fleshing out" a mere bare-bones listing of their ancestors. By consulting these sources, researchers can often discover the first pioneers and settlers of a region, their activities, and the conditions under which they lived as well as the reasons that may have prompted them to migrate.

If you are unfamiliar with genealogical research or the various sources that genealogists consult, a good introduction to the methods and scope of genealogical research is Gilbert Doane's Searching for Your Ancestors: The How and Why of Genealogy (1973). It is highly recommended and is cited in this bibliography as are other guides and manuals on this subject.

Should you need additional help with genealogical research, there are various groups and institutions you can consult. They are listed below:

a) In addition to having many genealogical materials, the Fayetteville Public Library at 217 E. Dickson has staff trained in helping patrons initiate genealogical research. If you are just beginning your research or need in-depth help, please contact them. They also offer a series of genealogical workshops for beginners. Their phone number is 442-2242.

b) The Arkansas History Commission, located in the Old State House, 300 W. Markham, Little Rock, Arkansas 72205, has many specialized genealogical materials, and also maintains a register of professional genealogists that can be contacted for searching on a fee basis. Their phone number is 371-2141.

c) Another possibility is the Arkansas Genealogical Society located at 4200 "A" Street, Little Rock, Arkansas 72205. They issue the Arkansas Family Historian, which often publishes letters from genealogists requesting or giving information. This acts as a valuable medium of exchange. It is also always a good idea to read the various county and local historical journals for any genealogical requests that are submitted to them. These journals are usually read by a network of genealogists who often share valuable information.
d) The Little Rock Genealogy Library, a branch of the Genealogical Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (the Mormons), has available some census records for Arkansas and maintains an index file to the microfilm of genealogical materials the Mormon church has maintained in their Salt Lake City, Utah archives. The Genealogical Society is engaged in one of the most active and encompassing genealogical programs in the world. Records of genealogical value are being filmed and thus far, more than 750,000 rolls of microfilm have been accumulated. Several thousand new rolls are being processed each month. Through an inter-library loan arrangement with the Little Rock Genealogy Library, individuals can have this microfilm ordered for them. For more information, contact Emogene Tindell at the library located in Cabot, Arkansas, P. O. Box 151, 72023. Their phone number is 982-7964.

One note about the location of call numbers cited in this bibliography. An "A" call number followed by a series of numbers will be found in the Special Collections Department located at the south end of the first level of the library. Books in Special Collections cannot be checked out, but can be consulted in their reading room. Film numbers (e.g. Film 904) are located in the Audio-Visual Department in the north end of the first level. The other call numbers are all Library of Congress (combination of letters and numbers) and are found on the various levels of the library.

General Histories of the State

The histories listed below give excellent biographical and genealogical information, such as names of pioneers and immigrants to various areas of Arkansas, prominent families, business and professional men and politicians, as well as other information that a genealogist might find useful. This is by no means an exhaustive list of Arkansas histories, just the more prominent ones that genealogists have often found helpful are listed here. Many of the condensed histories are listed under the section Regional Publications.

Goodspeed, Weston Arthur. Arkansas. Madison, Western Historical Association, 1890. (8 979.7 G62a)
A wealth of biographical information can be found in this volume.

Dallas, John. Biographical and pictorial history of Arkansas. 1887. (F 923 D18)

Thomas, David Yancey, ed. Arkansas and its people, a history, 1541-1930. New York, American Historical Society, 1930. (F 923 T43)

General Biographical Sources

This is also not an exhaustive list of biographical sources for the state. In the interests of space, just a few of the more useful biographies have been listed. Many of the histories listed above as well as the histories listed under Regional Publications often contain reliable biographical information.

The Book of Arkansas, a newspaper biographical reference work. Little Rock, The Arkansas Democrat, 1913. (F 923 B722)
Biographical sketches of prominent Arkansans.
